Dist. F. B. For Negroes Held Monday

The Southeastern Georgia District Farm Bureau meeting for Negroes was held Monday, July 5, 1960 at the Swainsboro Colored High School. The meeting was well attended with an estimated delegation of two hundred farm wives, County Agents and Vocational Teachers from fourteen counties. Screven County as usual had the largest delegation.

The meeting was superb in every respect, having both the educational and inspirational angles focused high and bright, all pointing toward Farm Bureau activities and benefits received by farmers. As the Executive County Farm Bureau president put it in his keynote address, "Farmers today must understand and take an active role in farmer organization and the problems of life that relate to economic welfare and mutual understanding, as well as to the social and religious standards of all American people." He further said, "We must plan together, work together and live together, all for a common cause, which is bringing upright descent and respectable before God and man". He said that the Farm Bureau helps to do all of this, and he urged all people: ministers, teachers, farmers and business men to join Farm Bureau and help in this crusade.

Roscoe Dunlap, Negro Farm Bureau Field Representative said that the meeting was the peoples meeting and he having a thorough knowledge of leadership and the ways and means of reaching or serving the masses of people, he gave farmers the lead in telling what they think about Farm Bureau and its benefits. Here, ministers, deacons, and farmers made some interesting remarks.

The minister, Rev. J. L. Little of Swainsboro, said, "Farm Bureau is a way of life. It prepares man and helps man to live full, abundant and circumspect lives. And, if man will only live that kind of life here, he can live anywhere he goes, and he even will not have to worry about where he is going when he dies, because he will have gone God's bidding here on earth. The deacon spoke of the benefits of Farm Bureau from the angle of fellowship.

He said that in Farm Bureau we get fellowship that is equal to that of Christianity. And that if we receive no more out of Farm Bureau than fellowship which is the share of the Kingdom of God, we are better off than most of the world. He said that the organization helps them to grow more produce and receive more profits which enables them to live better generally, eating better food, wearing better clothes, living in better houses and having better furniture, and in sending their children to school and giving them better education so that they too will be equipped with the tools of solving life's problems.

At a recent meeting of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station stated the domestic cigarette contains from 1 to 20 percent reconstituted tobacco, and 7 to 20 percent stem materials. Dr. T. J. R. Robertson, head of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, said that some foreign cigarettes contain as much as 30 percent of this material that was formerly considered as waste.

A crushed cigarette will not haunt your woods.

Application Is Answer To MH-30

Proper application is the answer to the MH-30 situation which has stirred up so much controversy in the tobacco industry. It was stated today by a leading agricultural scientist.

"Quality tobacco that is acceptable to both domestic and export tobacco companies can be grown with the use of MH-30, the sucker control chemical, if the chemical is correctly applied," said Dr. Douglas Tate, manager of agricultural chemical research and development for the Nausetuck Chemical division of United States Rubber Co., developer and manufacturer of MH-30.

"The evidence that this statement is correct is the more than one billion pounds of tobacco treated with MH-30 that have been bought on auction floors by tobacco companies over the past four years."

Continued emphasis on quality in tobacco, Dr. Tate added, must be confusing to growers who are aware of the extensive use of reconstituted tobacco and stems by both domestic and export companies.

"A recent report of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station stated the domestic cigarette contains from 1 to 20 percent reconstituted tobacco, and 7 to 20 percent stem materials. Dr. T. J. R. Robertson, head of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, said that some foreign cigarettes contain as much as 30 percent of this material that was formerly considered as waste."

Time For Pasture Requirement

(By: T. R. Powell, County Agent)

The summer months—June, July, and August—are an excellent time for farmers to take care of their pasture time requirements. Time can be applied at any time in the year; however, generally weather conditions during the summer months are more suitable for application of lime to pastures. There is less danger of lime spreader trucks bogging down in wet soggy soils. Also, since the summer months are a relatively slack period for fertilizer and lime dealers, farmers should be able to have their lime spread promptly. Farmers who intend to plant alfalfa or winter grazing crops in the fall should take care of the lime requirements of these fields in the summer months. It takes approximately 3 to 4 months for lime to become available in the soil. Therefore, to obtain maximum benefits to lime for fall planted crops, the lime should be applied 3 to 4 months before seeding time.

Lime is essential for good pastures and healthy livestock. You should determine lime requirements of pastures by having a soil test made. By applying lime in the summer, you can avoid possible delay in lime application because of the rush period of fall and winter months.

FARM PRODUCTION
The U. S. Farmer in 1958 produced 13 percent more wheat per acre, 50 percent more cotton per acre, and 22 percent more corn per acre than he produced just 10 years earlier. The per acre yields of 18 leading field crops have been increased by 71 percent in less than 20 years.

The Georgia farmer today provides enough food for himself and 22 fellow Americans. He is making it possible for more people to work in industry and help manufacture the many modern conveniences we enjoy so much. Less than 80 years ago, however, it took half the population which lived on the farm to feed them selves and the other half living off the farm.

What does this tremendous production level mean? Perhaps it would be more clear if we examined the population figures being released by the U. S. Census this year. Compare these figures with the census 10 years ago and note the trend of increasing population of this country. From this, it is apparent that not only must the American farmer continue the high rate of production, but he must increase his yields. By 1975, it is estimated that the American farmer must produce 36 percent more eggs, 61 percent more broilers, 66 percent more meat animals, 69 percent more fruit and vegetables, 46 percent more dairy products, and 26 percent more grain and potatoes. This must be done to maintain present standard diet.

CENTIPED GRASS
Did you know that you could ever-fertilize centipede? In a new grass? Centipede is a low fertility grass and cannot be fed like a Bermuda or Zoysia lawn.

Centipede lawns with an excess amount of nitrogen develop a yellow-green color. In severe cases, the grass will turn brown, wither and die. This condition is called Chlorosis (klo-ro-sis). The yellow-green color pattern is not consistent and circles and spots will sometimes appear.

If Bermuda grass is coming up in the affected areas of the lawn, it is a good indication the centipede grass is over-fertilized.

See your county agent for recommendations on treatment of this Chlorosis condition.

MILK PRODUCTION

A rise in milk production this year is predicted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The rate of milk production per cow was curbed somewhat during the first quarter of the year by adverse weather conditions. This was particularly true during March. In spite of this, the output per cow exceeded that of the same period last quarter by 1 percent.

Large increases in the production of cows are expected from late spring into the fall. While the rise in total milk output is expected, the dairyman's expenses are also expected to go up.

Local Youths Attend Recent Boys' State

The American Legion again sponsored its annual week-long Boys' State at the University of Georgia, Athens, Georgia, from June 12th to June 18th. Over 300 delegates and counselors from the entire state were there to study, practice the functions of state government. On arrival, each delegate was assigned to a city and county. There were two political parties, the National and the Federalists. They formed their own state, county and municipal government, electing officials and conducting mock sessions of legislature, making their own laws and enforcing them. This gave these youths a first hand glimpse of government in action. Previous delegates have stated that they learned more in one week at Boys' State than in all the years of their schooling. It enabled them to put into practice what they have been taught in school.

Over 300 delegates and counselors from the entire state were there to study, practice the functions of state government. On arrival, each delegate was assigned to a city and county. MAN TALKS

Reports From

WASHINGTON

(Editor's Note: The following is Senator Talmadge's final column for the year, and is being published in the final issue of the BULLDOCK TIMES.)

IN RETROSPECT one can only conclude that the Second Session of the 86th Congress created more of a record of activity and efficiency than it is now.

Despite all of its frenzied activity and millions of words of debate, the Congress of 1959 has not produced a single law.

My first column this year, faced it. These are the questions of which I am most concerned: (1) Is the nation's income or parsonage deficit spending and inflation further down the road?

(2) Is the nation's economic disaster, particularly in the field of education, delay, waste and duplication in its military establishment?

(3) Is the nation's economic ruin or doom him, and through him eventually itself, to the end of the world?

It goes without saying that you will be hearing much more about these and related issues as the nation's presidential election year unfolds.

I am keenly anticipating the coming of the new year, the new period and having the opportunity to visit in as many of our states and territories as possible.

As the new year begins, I am sure that you will find me in the field of human relations.

More attention was given by Congress to spending than to balancing the budget and only the votes and threats of veto from President Eisenhower kept its enthusiasm for costly new programs.

The only solution offered to our grave problems of defense was to appropriate additional funds which the Administration said it did not want and would not use.

Nothing was done, and why this country cannot get its act together.

Family during the week-end, Gary Deke returned with them on Friday after a visit with his mother, Mrs. Marion Bird recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Joe Odum and family of Hazlehurst.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Donakowski and son, Charles, toured the Mountains and other places of interest during the week.
